1 INTRODUCTION

Welcome to the first of four Beamstrike 'Era' guides, which contain specific details for staging battles at particular points along the Beamstrike timeline. This era booklet gives details for staging battles in the great Imperial Era. The background history gives a brief outline of the major 'sides' in conflicts staged in this era, tables are given for common vehicles in use. Lists of armies and points costs can be found, along with ideas on what colour schemes are used by various forces. The material in this guide is to be used alongside the Beamstrike core rules.

2 BACKGROUND/ HISTORY

Beamstrike Timeline extract.....

2531AD – The Ark becomes the first generation-ship to colonise and terraform a star system other than the Sun's. Space is rapidly colonised following the invention of the Immelmann jump drive.

2700AD – Hundreds of worlds now colonised spanning a huge area of the Galaxy, fleeting/ brief alien contacts rumoured but often not verified.

2900AD – The Imperium of Man is founded.

3560AD – The heyday of the Imperium, a time of maximum control of the core worlds, although the Imperium finds unrest in some outlying areas in the shape of the Crimson Rebels. The Great droid war takes place. The first significant alien contacts occur.

3600AD – Knowledge of the rebellion spreads further to the frontier colonies. The idea that the Imperium could be defied takes hold, and inspires the outcasts, exiles, and convicts there to take up arms against their persecutors. The Crimson Rebel movement, now made up of disparate groups and motivations, acquires a common identity, adopting the religious and ideological basis promoted by its mysterious leadership.

3862AD – Discovery of the Harvosette Artefacts by the rebels, consisting of thousands of archives, teachings, and histories detailing the creation, progression, and foretold end of the universe. The rebel leadership develops a pseudo-religious philosophy around the artefacts.

4220AD – Over-expansion, costly skirmishes with alien races, and growing religious fundamentalism leads to a breakdown in order. The Imperium is dissolved, and major trading organisations assume control of portions of the old Empire. A new dark age of greed and corruption begins. Aeons of divisiveness, war, and suffering are to follow.

4480AD – Sickened by the human race's slide into high-tech barbarism, a powerful, mysterious elite calling themselves the Shepherds retire to the recently re-terraformed Earth and isolate themselves. Not wishing to be threatened or discovered by those they see as barbarians and animals, they arrest the evolution of the rest of humanity and of the known intelligent alien races, ensuring that their intelligence is capped for eternity. This is achieved through a vast, secret programme of genetic alteration, achieved through a purpose built, self-replicating virus carried via the food chain. Knowledge of Earth becomes obscured. Many begin to treat the story of Earth as simply a creation myth. Knowledge is lost, and the origin of the species becomes unclear. The Dark Age continues.

The Imperial Era sees a time when Man has long since reached the pinnacles of science and technology, but has failed to develop morally along with this, resulting in a fragmented, warring society, plagued by piracy and conflict. The dominant power in Mans segment of the galaxy is the Imperium, whose centre lies in the so called 'Core Worlds' of Earth and Mars, laid barren from centuries of war and extraction of raw materials used in the expansion of the human race into space. The Imperium continues to expand, sucking newly found worlds dry of resources, and recruiting/ drafting individuals to fight in its armies. The Imperium faces threats from several sources, the ever present 'Crimson Rebels', internal squabbling among the High Lords of the Imperium, the increasing number of Alien Races making themselves known, and the possibility of another great droid war.

This rich tapestry of unrest and conflict provides the perfect backdrop for small to medium scale 15mm miniature battles!

The Imperium of Man

A massive, galaxy spanning 'Empire' controls mans activities to greater or lesser degrees. The Empire, headed by a long line of Emperors and Empresses (Currently Empress Ima) has now been in existence for 900 years. The Empress is largely a figurehead, as most of the empires authority comes from the directives of the High Lords, who each control a region of space.

The worlds of the Sol system, where Man originated, are mostly barren and inhospitable, ravaged by conventional and thermonuclear conflicts of times past. They do however house continent spanning 'Megacities', whose demand for raw materials, luxury items and other raw supplies is ever increasing and provided by the constant trading supply routes from the outer and fringe worlds.

The Empire uses a mixture of fear, overwhelming military strength, and mild brain washing to keep control of its billions of citizens, but it is true to say that the further away from the core of the Imperium you venture, the weaker its influence is felt. The brain washing used is propaganda at its most blatant, exaggerated news stories about the terrors of space, the exploits of the dreadful Crimson Rebels (who squabble more amongst themselves than with the Imperium), and other horrors of the universe help keep the Imperial citizenship fearful of their existence and grateful for the protective arms of the Imperium.

The Crimson Rebels

The greatest threat to the power of the Imperium lies on the fringe of the Inner Worlds. Here, the outcasts, exiles and convicts persecuted by the Imperial powers have joined together in a unified struggle against the forces of oppression that rule the known universe. This revolutionary movement has spread like wildfire amongst the populations of the barren, inhospitable and isolated frontier colonies - the so-called Dark Worlds.

"The Crimson Rebels are of mysterious and shadowy origins. It is rumoured to have been rejuvenated by the discovery by rebel colonists of ancient alien artefacts on one of the far flung planets on the outer fringes of the Imperium. These ancient and arcane texts form the ideological and spiritual core of the Rebels. Some say that those who have dedicated their lives to the study of these esoteric scripts have themselves acquired unexplained powers over the natural laws of the universe. These Masters of the Rebellion are rarely seen outside their hidden desert fortress on the planet Echor"

The Rebellion itself began as a resistance movement dedicated to freeing the enslaved and brutalized populations of the barren frontier prison worlds. Its initial lack of cohesion and military strength were counter balanced by an almost religious fervour amongst its followers. This enabled the Rebels to strike back at the forces of the Imperium through a campaign of hit and run guerrilla warfare. As the Rebellion grew in size and strength it became more organized under the leadership of several powerful clans. At this point the Rebels adopted a regular military organisation in addition to the smaller insurgent forces operating throughout the feudal out worlds.

At the fanatical core of the Crimson Rebellion are the Clan Lords. These elite warriors form the military leadership of the Rebel forces and are drawn from the ranks of the most powerful and influential Rebels. Clan Lords will often be accompanied into battle by their own loyal clan retainers, the Lord's Household troops, who are renowned for their willingness to fight to the death. Some of the Clan lords and household troops are skilled in the arcane martial arts, making them fierce opponents in hand to hand combat.

The bulk of the Rebels forces are drawn from the ranks of the poor and disenfranchised on the frontier worlds. These devotes of the Crimson Rebellion are lightly armoured and armed, often being equipped with basic weaponry including the ubiquitous force sword and hand flamer. A high importance is placed on the mastery of the sword and practice in its use is fundamental to combat training.

Such weapons favour the close combat tactics adopted by the Rebellion. The suicidal nature of such attacks can lead to high casualties in battle and the use of combat drugs is not unusual in order to enhance the staying power of the devotees.

The best of the devotees are frequently trained for specialist roles to become Disciple skirmishers, pioneers and scouts. Most of the rest of those who survive the test of battle become regular troops in the armed forces of the Rebels, the so-called 'Warriors'. Ultimately, the most adept and hardened of these individuals are selected for intensive training in the clandestine arts to become the feared assassins of the Crimson rebellion

Why the Rebellion fights the Imperium

Initially the Rebels were formed out of African and Asian peoples, who, under the oppression and military control of the Imperium, wanted out. Initially as the United Revolutionary Force (URF), their prophet was a man named Neinzig, who preached the scriptures of Allah. To a Rebel, Allah is the Almighty, Creator and Sustainer of the entire universe, He is similar to nothing and nothing is comparable to Him. It is because the High Lords of the Imperium have elevated themselves to an almost God- like state, and the drone- like Imperial population see these figures as deities that the conflict between Imperial and Rebel beliefs clash.

The era containing the inception of the Holy War against the Imperium, (lead by Neinzig and the other Masters of the Inner circle) is what many call the Early Crimson Dynasty. Successive descendants of the original brotherhood masters governed and set the direction of the Rebellion for 250 years.

Things changed with a fantastic discovery on Harvosette, in the Kapteyn system, on the outer frontier. Rebel colonists discovered a buried temple, thought to have lain dormant for Millions of years. Within this temple were stored thousands of archives and preaching's, a whole ideology and spiritual core of beliefs and factual events concerning the creation of the universe, its progression and ultimate end. The startling thing was, much of the material within paralleled the beliefs of the Rebellion exactly, so giving confirmation to the beliefs already held, and adding many more layers to them.

So began the Late Crimson Dynasty, initially with a reorganization of troops and leaders, some were executed as the new teachings were not accepted, and more fragmentation of existing sects and factions resulted. Through all of this, the prophet Neinzig, now into his 300th year (!) played a major part, and many speculate his continued existence, long after many of the original brotherhood had expired was due to his intimate knowledge of the teachings and his super-human powers. Others, more atheist in belief, came to the conclusion his entire body must now be cybernetic, and his original brain replaced many times by some advanced genetic cell cloning techniques.

Merchants and Traders

Far from the core Imperial sphere of influence on the inner worlds, the Galactic Imperium of Mankind still maintains a stranglehold of control over its citizens by way of the High Lords, who rule single worlds or systems. This tentative control, however, is slowly slipping as frontier worlds develop and question the need to be sucked dry of their resources to feed and provide for the mega-city drones of the inner worlds.

Merchants and traders of the Galaxy range from enterprising single individuals acting with a small group trading in a starship, to the head Executives of large commercial organisations. The merchants trade, barter and negotiate their profits from their allocated areas, ever mindful that the Imperium always takes its 'cut' or 'percentage' from their earnings.

Merchant Barons, appointed by the Lord Knights, are those in overall trading control of specified trade areas and routes. The Merchant Barons have a few things in common:
You cannot buy merchant baron status (except in a few, notoriously public cases), you are a nobleman, an existing rich landowner and trader, or a very talented trader, who has caught the attention of the local Lord Knight and thus the Empire. Seeing the opportunity to make money or retrieve resources, the individual is elevated to 'Merchant Baron' status by the Imperium, and given license to trade and operate between planets, shipping and moving goods of all types, from luxuries to raw construction materials and foods.
The merchant barons are financially ruthless, and quash any threats to their monopoly in a particular area. Imperial patrol vessels are usually at hand to assist in the apprehension of smugglers and under-traders who eat into the Barons (and the Imperiums) profit margins. Particularly harsh, unfair or just plain criminal Merchant Barons earn the title of 'robber barons'. In the latter era of the Imperium, the major trading organisations became more and more powerful, and as the Imperial grip on regions of space began to slip, corporate control became firmer.

Mercenary armies

Both the Imperium and the Crimson Rebels use attached Mercenary elements in battles. Mercs are employed where deploying regular army elements is either too risky/ politically embarrassing or when the situation is just too deadly. Often poorly paid and equipped, mercenary squads suffer a -1 on any troop rolls which need to be made for them if attached to a larger force. This penalty does not apply if the Mercenary army is fielded on its own (as the Mercs often have been able to negotiate better conditions/ weapons and are not under direct control of an untrusted leader)

Alien Races

Only a few of the Major Alien races have had significant Human contact and may be fielded in large battles, most of the others are restricted to scouting parties/ first contact type games, or may be an attached group of mercenaries.

ALIEN RACE	Imperial Era	1d100 Random*
Hibevor	Y	1-5
Growwlan	R	6-10
Thuntra	R	11-13
Centaling	R	14-15

Y= Yes, unrestricted use, large forces can be fielded.
R= Restricted. Small attached mercenary forces or exploratory scout units only.
- = No, Alien race not available normally unless special circumstance/ scenario.

* 1d100 dice roll if random Alien race needed.

Alien attachments

During the Imperialist era, many Alien life forms are encountered as Attached 'advisors' or Mercenaries. Both the Imperium and the Crimson Rebels levied for the favour of the Major Alien presences, often with limited success. When Aliens were present, they often had their own agendas or were simply taking notes on Human behaviour in order to be able to better understand human combat tactics and technology should they ever threaten the Aliens existence (which in thousands of year's time they did of course). An attached Alien force may not exceed 30% of the total point's value of the player's army.

Notes on Technology

The weapons, equipment and vehicles in the Imperial Era range from low technology swords, ropes and steam powered trains, to conversion beamers, portable multi sensors and anti- grav tanks. Most individuals will have no idea how much of the more advanced items work and have little interest, but in practical terms will be able to operate those items pertinent to their chosen occupation or career. To people from less technologically advanced planets, advanced equipment will be seen as magical or god-like, or may simply not be comprehended or noticed at all. Many planets with a low Tech level, however, will have an awareness of advanced cultures because they trade with them or have been visited/ attacked by them and may accept high technology without fear or superstition, but with a keen interest, especially if items are sold to them make their lives easier.

3 ERA SPECIFIC RULES AND WEAPONS

Weapons and Equipment.

Ancient, contemporary and future items are allowed in games set in the Imperial Era, so no far future items are allowed to be fielded (i.e. no Gauss rifles or P- beams). The following weapons may also be used.

Weapon	Points Cost	TO HIT SCORE NEEDED RANGE BANDS IN INCHES						DAMAGE TYPE	Remarks
		0-4	4-20	20-40	40-80	80+	Max
Anti-Matter beamer	15	6	7	7	9	11	100	special	Damage is variable, see below
Blast pistol	3	6	8	-	-	-	10	High
Blast Carbine	5	6	7	-	-	-	20	High	2 shots/ phase at same target
Blast rifle	6	5	6	7	-	-	30	High

 Throw a 1D6 for damage type: 1=low, 2=Standard, 3-4=High, 5=Power, 6= Total

The Anti matter beamer projects a narrow beam of anti- matter energy which can disrupt flesh, plasticrete and armour alike.

Blast weapons are high- Imperium versions of Laser weapons, the laser beam is augmentated with pulses of charged particles, increasing laser damages to near bolt weapon levels, but retaining laser accuracy and reliability. Blast weapons are not in general Imperial use, but may be found within specialist units.

4 ERA SPECIFIC GAME SCENARIOS

1d10	Name	Points each Attacker/ Defender	Attacker setup	Defender Setup	Victory conditions
1-2	Patrol	500/ 500	Within 30cm of table edge	Within 30cm of table edge	Standard
3	Ambush	500/700	At either side of the road/ path and in cover	Down centre of board, 20cm wide, usually on a road or path	Defenders win if they manage to get 25% of the point value of forces up the road and off the table.
4	Checkpoint breakthrough	600/ 1000	Within 30cm table edge	Up to half the table, must be in the form of a wall or barbed wire line cutting table in 2, with checkpoint in the middle	Attackers win if they get 20% of the point's value of their forces through the checkpoint defenses onto enemy territory.
5	Assault	1000/1000	Within 30cm of table edge	Has up to half of the table setup with defenses.	Standard
6	Assassination	500/1000	Within 20cm table edge	Has whole ¾ of the rest of table	Attacker wins if a pre-nominated enemy figure (one of their main leaders) is killed.
7	Demolition	500/1000	Within 20cm table edge	Has whole ¾ of rest of table	Attacker wins if a pre-nominated building/ bridge/ vehicle is destroyed. Sappers with demolition packs may be needed.
8	Last stand	1000/500	On any table edge surrounding defender, only up to 5cm onto table.	Within 20cm of the middle of the table, usually in some sort of building or cover	The defenders win if they manage to survive for 3 turns, when massive reinforcements turn up
9	Convoy	500/1000	At either side of the road/ path and in cover	Down centre of board, 20cm wide, usually on a road or path	Attackers win if they get 25% of the point's value of their forces through the checkpoint defenses onto enemy territory.
10	Total War	1000-2000	Within 50cm of table edge	Within 50cm of table edge	Standard

Other scenario ideas:

- Civilian riot (loads of figures, poorly armed and armoured!)
- Dropzone. Dropships are dropping in troops/ equipment from low orbit in drop ships. Well positioned enemy forces including anti aircraft emplacements are shooting the hell out of the incoming troops.
- Civilian protection/ evacuation operation (victory depends on percentage of civilians saved!)
- Bootleg/ arms run of a few armed trucks through a blockade or checkpoint
- Armoured battle
- City battle, needs lots of scenery and buildings, but means lots of close up action, and template weapons come into their own.
- Sniper alley. One player gets several well dug in snipers and a much larger force is pinned down. How long can the snipers hold off the much larger forces?

5 ARMY LISTS FOR IMPERIALIST ERA

Firstly we present a listing of individual troops which can be 'pick and mixed' into suitable squads as you like. Secondly, some example Squads and formations are suggested, but feel free to re-arrange any as you like. We do not believe in completely rigid force structures requiring specific models to be purchased before you can field them, but the models you use should be representative of the game figure to avoid confusion on both sides!
Thirdly a selection of pre- made Heroes is listed for the major armies, to give you an idea about how to create and list them for in-game use.

INDIVIDUAL TROOP TYPES

Note a * beside figure name means it may act independently and does not need to be in squad cohesion.

The Troop types above give a wide range of individual soldiers found commonly within Imperial armies. The Imperium favours the Gyrobolt gun, a sturdily built, high damage weapon with reasonable range. Jetpacks are supplied routinely to troops, giving an extra burst of speed where needed or allowing troops to jump over obstacles or into action. Many Imperial troop squads are based around a 6 man team. 4 regular troopers are commanded by squad leader and backed up by a support weapon trooper. Imperial armies at times find themselves in conflict with all of the other armies in this Era booklet, with the exception of the Police, who are largely appointed by the Imperium.

The Crimson Rebels seek to convert others to their way of life and thinking, as have many other religious groups through the ages. Therefore, the decay of the Imperium is not seen as 'mission accomplished' for the Rebels, but merely a process marking the end of the beginning of their campaign to bring Dynastic Law, as defined by the Harvosette artifacts, to the entire universe.

The crimson Rebel's biggest enemy in this Era is the Imperium, but due to their religious fervor and strange beliefs, but also with the Companies, and with most Governments large and small, human and alien, as the Rebellion movement spreads beyond the Dark Worlds and into the rest of the known universe.

The Rebellion is wide spread, and many cells and units are out of regular contact with the Dark Worlds, operating on a semi- autonomous basis. Further, some factions refuse to accept the validity of the Artifact teachings, and likewise refuse to comply with the new Rebel structure. Add to this the frequent explosions of armed conflict between different races, cultures, cults, and other factions within the Rebellion, and it is clear that Crimson Rebel organization and equipment is much more flexible and variable than that of the Imperium and other organized forces.

Having said this, there are several favoured weapons of the Crimson Rebels- The ubiquitous palm flamer, Sun gun and Plasma guns are chosen to bring flaming Redemption to the unbelievers, and widespread use of longer ranged Laser weapons help keep Rebel forces on an even keel with the Imperium and other threats.

There are 6 separate Rebel elements in the Imperial Era- The Zandrian, Imorian, Allorian, Draconsian, Cancrian and Omicronian factions are in continual turmoil and struggle, often in- house !squabbling is more intense than battles with other Armies.

The armies of the main trading organizations (or 'Companies') are organized along broadly similar lines to the armies of the Imperium. The doctrine is slightly different in that more money is spent on each soldier, making them of higher quality and giving them better equipment.

Although the armies of the companies occasionally fight the remains of the decaying Imperium for power and influence, they also naturally come into conflict with the Crimson Rebels, who see them as more-of-the–same after the Imperium.

Companies also quell the uprisings of the exploited and downtrodden citizenry, who suffer low pay and high prices, on a fairly regular basis. In short, the Major Companies have inherited all of the enemies of the Imperium, as well as having to fight the last vestiges of that dying colossus.

1: Senior bodyguard may never move beyond cohesion distance of the Merchant he is protecting, even if his master dies. (Must stay within 3 inches of Merchants body which may not be moved for the rest of the game)

Skirmishes, battles and small wars are common on the frontier worlds of the outer fringe where many rival traders and merchants jostle for power and trading opportunities. The politics and disposition of merchant barons varies greatly, some sympathize with local rebel groups, while others may back the Imperium or Redemption. Pirate forces frequently attack shipments of goods, either in space or on the land/ oceans of a world's surface.

Certain goods attract more attention than others, cargo such as narcotics, firearms, computers, gemstones and precious metals fetch a high price anywhere in the galaxy and any merchant baron trading in these items better have forces protecting them.

Some Merchants now trade with some of the Alien races which have made themselves known to man. Hibevor, are quite keen to trade with Humankind, and the vicious Calmahh and Urgk'ahh just take what they come across.

With regard to the actual army list, the Scout Trader and Robber Baron/ Pirate Merchant squads include the Merchant and a landing party of his or her crew. With regard to the Merchant droid, sending in a droid in ones place to do business may be frowned upon, but sending a droid in ones place to do combat will be positively laughed at- but it does happen.

Merchant armour is a fusion of light and mesh armour, woven into a fashionable and durable, yet comfortable outfit. Often brightly coloured, or highly decorated, the price is high for a suit individually tailor made.

Merchant weapons tend to be close range, getting most use when inter- merchant negotiations suddenly break down or when bodyguards have to eliminate assassins and other such threats. Pirates favour cartridge pistols, tending to find themselves in combat situations a little more than the average Merchant. Barons traditionally wear concealed Null shields for last gasp defence. It's a jungle out there…..

Barons have been known to join forces with each other against mutual enemies, for example Rebel or Alien invasion of affluent or resource rich systems. Some merchant coalitions sometimes even take on Imperial forces in cases where they have been double crossed by the local Lord Knight or such.

Mercenary armies have been in demand since the dawn of war. Both the Imperium and the Crimson Rebellion use mercenary squads to bolster regular battle groups, and sometimes employ whole armies to tackle missions which would otherwise be impossible due to lack of manpower. Mercenary armies are sometimes gathered by wealthy individuals to defend private interests, or to support private causes and agendas. A typical use of mercenaries recently was in the military coup of the newly formed Government of the planet Terious 3.

The police troop list represents local law enforcement all over the galaxy, from the typical law officer patrolling the continent- spanning megacities of the inner worlds to the well respected and highly trained and motivated Sentinels. Police troops will rarely battle Imperial forces, but battles with the Crimson Rebels, Merchants and company soldiers will be common place.

Note: RA= Right arm, LA= Left arm. Number after HERO status is bonus to hit.

Model Available: models used are up to you entirely, but in the UK, TTG= Tabletop Games figure, sold by 15mm.co.uk under the 'laserburn' 15mm range, GZG= Ground Zero Games figures. These have been chosen as the 'best fit' models for the setting/ weapons carried etc.

8 Characters and Heroes

The following pre- generated Characters and Heroes may be used to add spice to a game and allow 'continuing' characters and storylines. Note that most of these individuals will be difficult to 'kill' in a tabletop game and may be used a s players 'own' characters in continuing campaigns. If you are using a compatible roleplaying system alongside these mass combat rules (examples are 'Laserburn' by Tabletop games and 'Traveller' by Games Design Workshop), these individuals may also be 'player characters' in these systems.

Name: The Crimson Druid (Crimson Rebels) 76 points.		Hit Bonus: +4
Skills: Nerves of steel Ambidextrous Constitution	Armour: PA	Training: Hero
	Weapons: Blast pistol x 2 Power glove	Equipment: Targetter Jet pack Invis cloak
Story: Hero of the Crimson rebellion, The Crimson druid assassinates prominent imperial officials on a regular basis, and leads a crack band of Rebel fanatics into battle. His weakness is his blind hatred for the Imperium.

Name: Neinzig (Crimson Rebels) 94points		Hit Bonus: +6
Skills: Constitution Fortune Dodge Leadership	Armour: PA	Training: Hero
	Weapons: Custom pistol equivalent to Gauss rifle. Power sword, specialist grenades.	Equipment: Targetter Null shield
Story: Lead figure in the Rebellion, Neinzig is continually recruiting and promoting 'the cause'. His weakness is his lack of anything other than driven passion to see the end of the Imperium.

Name: Prophet Egor (Crimson Rebels) 81 points		Hit Bonus: +3
Skills: Constitution fortune Leadership	Armour: PA	Training: Hero
	Weapons: Sun gun	Equipment: Targetter, Pro shield
Story: Leader of the ILF, one of the breakaway CR factions, Egor preaches the values of the old dynasty and promotes direct military hit and run/ guerrilla actions against the Imperium. His weakness is his utter distain for New dynasty followers.

Name: Aaron- Cyborr- Denston (Free lance, Mercenary) 56 points		Hit Bonus: +4
Skills: Ambidextrous Nerves of steel Sniper	Armour: PA	Training: Hero
	Weapons: Boltgun (access to anything else he wants)	Equipment: Targetter
Story: Partially cybernetic, with digital body implants, aaron is nevertheless all man. A lone adventurer, despised by both rebel and Imperial forces alike because of his assassinations on both sides, Aaron is a true bounty hunter, hiring out to whoever pays the highest. His weakness is his need for an occasional oil bath and his lack of caution.

Name: Dave Solo (Freelance, anti- Imperium) 64 points		Hit Bonus: +5
Skills: Nerves of steel Aggresive Quick fire	Armour: LA	Training: Hero
	Weapons: Blast carbine Missile launcher	Equipment: Targetter, jet pack, knife, specialist grenade pack
Story: A decorated Hero of the Imperial Eighth wars, and bitterly betrayed by the Imperium in a later campaign, Solo seeks revenge, plotting to kill the Empress herself. Usually found with a dedicated entourage of adventurers and traders in tow.

Name: Neiolos Supranomicon (Mercenary) 66 points		Hit Bonus: +5
Skills: Quick fire Leadership Sniper	Armour: PA	Training: Hero
	Weapons: Blast rifle, force sword	Equipment: Targetter
Story: 70% human, 30% cyborg, adventurer and leader/ hirer of mercenary forces, made his name in the battle of Imor, supporting Redemption troops against an imperial assault and helping turn the tide of this surprise attack with a mercenary army of 500 troops.

Name: Lacksie Blue (Mercenary) 72 points.		Hit Bonus: +4
Skills: Quick fire Leadership fortune	Armour: PA	Training: Hero
	Weapons: Pulse rifle, force sword, LAW pistol	Equipment: Targetter
Story: Another high ranking ex- Inquisition trooper. Lacksie was transferred to the Inquisition from the Imperial general forces when her unusually sharp cruelty and lack of scruples was noticed by her CO. She rose quickly through the ranks but soon became bored with rooting out rebels and other traitors. She realized she could amass a much bigger fortune striking it out on her own with a private army. Now she is hunted by Inquisition agents, and feared by everyone else. She has a powerful magnetic personality, and those that follow her, both men and women, do so in awe of her and in love with her. Her weakness is her vanity.

Name: Yangtze (Mercenary) 120 points		Hit Bonus: +6
Skills: Ambidextrous Initiative Dodge	Armour: AD	Training: Hero
	Weapons: RA: 2x support bolter with Targetter LA: Plasma gun, power glove.	Equipment: Targetter, Invis cloak, jet pack, digimedic,
Story: Disillusioned combat monk of an ancient religious order, Yangtze often appears on the side of troops fighting tyranny, usually in the form of the Imperium or corporate based armies. Manages to hide away in suspended animation between epochs, therefore any army except Imperial , Company, or Profiteer armies may field Yangtze in any Era. Yangtze believes in peace and compassion….. after the oppressors have been blasted!. His weakness is his obsessive belief in absolute fairness.

Name: General Turan (Imperial) 31 points		Hit Bonus:0
Skills: Leadership	Armour: FI	Training: Elite
	Weapons: RF bolter	Equipment: Targetter
Story: Tough as old boots, a real old style General, and sworn to rid the universe of the Redemption threat, Turan is one of the key Powers of the Imperium, and doesn't mind getting his hands dirty on the ground. His weakness is his blind hatred for the Rebellion.

Name: Captain Roger Rasch (Imperium) 53 points		Hit Bonus: +3
Skills: Nerves of steel Leadership Grenadier	Armour: LA	Training: Hero
	Weapons: Bolt rifle, specialist grenade pack	Equipment: Targetter, Energy shield
Story: Dashing, young Imperial crusader, close in line of succession for Imperial high lord status, and eager to impress, Roger's weakness is his belief in his own invincibility.

Name: High Lord Tamlin (Imperium) 79 points.		Hit Bonus: +6
Skills: Constitution Swordsman Gun skill hvy bolter.	Armour: PA	Training: Hero
	Weapons: Power glove, Hvy bolter, power sword	Equipment: Targetter, digimedic, laser painter, Proj shield.
Story: Single minded and deadly in close combat, Tamlin is not a stand back leader, and can often be found at the spearhead of a prominenet Imperial assault. Destined for great things, if he can live long enough to see the benefits! Tamlin is a master of close combat techniques. His weakness is his care for his troops.

Name: Orson 'Ad-man' Xymox (Company) 136 points		Hit Bonus: +5
Skills: leadership Intuitive Ambidextrous	Armour: AD	Training: Hero
	Weapons: LA: 2x sun gun, power glove. RA: Missile launcher with Targetter, specialized grenade pack.	Equipment: Targetter, laser painter, proj shield, digimedic.
Story: Orson Xymox will do anything for a sale. He started his career in advertising, but soon exhibited such a ruthless, sacrificial dedication to the company that his bosses made him swap his palmtop for a Battlesuit. Orson is rotund, creative, flamboyant, sharp- eyed and quick- tempered. His weakness is his fragile ego.

Name: Donovann Slann (Merchant Baron) 70 points		Hit Bonus: +5
Skills: Fortune Constitution Dodge	Armour: LA	Training: Hero
	Weapons: 2x blast pistol, power sword.	Equipment: Targetter, Null shield,
Story: Infamous organ legger Baron Donovaan is a great shot, but knows when running for dear life is the better part of valour. A sworn enemy of Dave Solo and Neillos Supranomicon from times past, his weakness is his cowardess.

Name: Jenno Cranvoll (Merchant Baron) 51 points		Hit Bonus: +5
Skills: Leadership Constitution	Armour: LA	Training: Hero
	Weapons: Laser pistol, force sword	Equipment: Targetter
Story: Jenno has turned a fast credit in most of the bars of the Centaurus- Carina arm at one time or another. Part pirate, part respectable trader, even Jenno himself has yet to make up his mind which he is. His weakness is his drinking.

Name: Princess Ann Eeta (Merchant Baroness) 67 points		Hit Bonus: +4
Skills: Leadership Swordswoman Dodge	Armour: LA	Training: Hero
	Weapons: laser pistol, force sword	Equipment: Targetter, skimpy outfit, Null shield, digimedic.
Story: She tells everyone she is a princess, but she was born in a ramshackle shed in a backwater town on Imor. Escaping the Rebel press- gangs, she told her family that one day she'd really be someone. She's well on the way now to amassing a huge fortune. Her weakness is her love for captain Jakk S'Paro.

Name: Captain Jakk S'Paro (Merchant Pirate) 72 points		Hit Bonus: +4
Skills: Leadership Swordsman Fortune	Armour: LA	Training: Hero
	Weapons: Cart pistol, force sword	Equipment: Targetter, null shield
Story: Once employed by the Imperium, Jakk used to trade gadgets for raw materials in the fringe worlds. On one famous occasion, he refused to bring back slaves as ordered. Instead he set them free in the Dark worlds. This infuriated the local Lord Knights, and his ship, the Wicked Wench, was destroyed by a small Imperial Spec. ops force. Jakk was branded a pirate and enemy of the Imperium and went on the run. He began to enjoy his life on the edge, and even had his old ship salvaged for him by Rebel specialists, on the understanding that he would smuggle goods for them- an agreement he promptly ignored, much to the embarrassment of the rebellion. He re-christened his ship the Black Pearl, S' Paro's most obvious physical characteristic is a slightly drunken stagger, accompanied byawkwardly flailing hand gestures that make him look unfocussed. His seemingly perpetual drunkenness could also be why he slurs his speech. The letter 'p' for pirate was branded on his right wrist by the Imperium. His weakness is his love for his starship.

9 ARMY COLOURS/ PAINTING GUIDE

You may of course paint your armies in whatever colours you wish, but presented below are some suggestions for the main players in the battles of the Imperial Era.
